This program will focus on the political campaigns of the upcoming 2010 state and national elections. It will assess the nature of the campaign, special focus on the closest races and the probabilities that power will change hands.

Professor Tom Volgy, PhD, has been a professor at the UofA since 1971 and is a former recipient of the best teacher award. He teaches courses primarily in International Politics at the undergraduate, honors, and graduate levels. Professor Volgy has served in office for 14 years, including as Mayor of Tucson, and he assisted in democratization and public policy training programs in East Europe and Central Asia between 1989 and the present.
